

NaChé's Bio - 2025

NaChé Thompson is an educator, entrepreneur, and equity advocate committed to creating opportunities for marginalized communities. As the founder of NaChé Cosmetics, she develops beauty solutions for people most often excluded by the mainstream cosmetics industry. Her work reflects a passion for inclusivity, sustainability, and economic empowerment, particularly within the Inland Empire.

NaChé is a proud mother of two incredible boys, Iveren (age 14) and Isaiah (age 11), who inspire her commitment to creating a more equitable world. Her career journey has included roles as teacher in San Bernardino City Unified School District and she served as a district administrator in both Adelanto Elementary School District and Redlands Unified School District, where she currently serves as the Coordinator of Diversity and Equity.

Beyond her professional roles, NaChé sits on regional education subcommittees, where she works to advance educational equity for Black students in the region. A proud member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Incorporated, NaChé has dedicated her personal and professional lives to public service. As someone who lives with disabilities, she champions inclusive workplace practices, community care, and self-efficacy. NaChé's work embodies innovation with purpose and centers community in all aspects.
