

Shanitra Deas

"Casserian Engeri" is the traditional greeting of the African Masai tribe which means "and how are the children?". The Masai believe that the well-being of the children is a reflection of the health and prosperity of the entire society. Shanitra Deas is an educator and true advocate for children. She is not only invested in their education but also focused on ensuring that they have the skills and knowledge to serve their communities and live productive lives. Shanitra, a former teacher, instructional coach, assessor, and principal is a graduate of Columbia College with a Bachelor's Degree in English and holds two Masters' degrees in Divergent Learning and Educational Leadership. In addition to these distinctions, she is also a National Board Certified teacher. Shanitra is married to Jabari Deas, and they are the proud parents of two sons. In her spare time, she enjoys spending time with her family, cooking, crafting, and reading. Shanitra looks forward to using her skills to continue to learn, grow, excel, and make 95 Percent Group's mission a reality for all children. She wants to create a future where when the question is asked, "How are the children?"...she can respond "the children are well."